Invitation to C.H.S. Carnival

Carmel High School's annual Carnival, featuring a white elephant auction, will take place on Saturday, April 20, noon to 4 p.m., on the girls' playing field.

A chicken barbeque, craft booths and games for people of all ages are planned for the outdoor festival.

Proceeds from the Carnival are to be used to finance the activities of groups and clubs at the school and to support the junior prom.

Preparations for Tularcitos Carnival

In anticipation of the annual Tularcitos School Carnival to be held May 11 at 11 a.m., collection for the rummage sale has begun.

Items which are packed in boxes or bags may be taken to Ralph Verde's Upholstery Shop, and other items may go to the school office. Larger pieces should be stored at home until May 10.

All donations are welcome. Persons who have questions or can help with the sale are asked to call Veronica Lindsay at 659-4523.

Easter Egg Hunt

Valleyites up to seven years of age are invited to the annual Easter Egg Hunt on April 14 at the fire station on Via Contenta. The hunt will begin at 1 p.m. and last until all 150-dozen colored eggs are found. Special prizes will be awarded to those who find golden eggs, and baskets will be provided for all.

Poetry Shell Contest continued

The deadline for submission of previously unpublished poems for the Poetry Shell's 1974 Spring Contest has been extended to April 14. Poems of not more than 25 lines (although additional lines will not disqualify distinctive work) should be sent with titles on 8½ by 11 inch typing paper, one poem per page, to Lois Wilson, Box 31, Pacific Grove, 93950 or to Jane Ramirez, P.O. Box 2162, Carmel 93921.

Tennis benefit

Childrens Home Society of the Monterey Peninsula, Punch and Judy Chapter, cordially invites you to attend their annual Women's Invitational Tennis Tournament, April 29, at the Carmel Valley Pacquet Club. (Rain date May 6th.)

The cost is $16 for each team of two. This includes luncheon, tennis, fashion show, and raffle. Luncheon only is $3.

Suicide Prevention

The Monterey County Suicide Prevention Center needs additional volunteers for its staff. Classes will begin Monday, April 22 and will meet every Monday and Thursday from that date through May 27. All prospective volunteers will be interviewed in person before the training class commences.

The course consists of lectures, study discussion groups practice call sessions and a final exam and evaluation session. All volunteers are expected to devote four hours weekly to phone duty.

For further details, applicants may call 373-0713 or 373-6363.

Harlequin Domino Tournament

Invitations are in the mail for the first Harlequin Domino Tournament, an elegant fund raising activity, sponsored by the Children's Experimental Theater of the Monterey Peninsula, a non-profit organization which works with children for children. The event will take place at Rancho Canada on May 11, at 4 p.m.

Chairmen of the event, Mrs. Robert Gay and Mrs. John Roland, are anticipating a good turnout. There are exciting prizes, including weekends in Silverado and Coronado, a cocktail party for 25 for one hour at the La Playa, a choice of one of five paintings by well-known local artists, to say nothing of stupendous first-place trophies and the door prize.

For $25 admission, (tax deductible) each player gets the challenge of a good game with interesting people, the chance to win I.D.A. master points, wonderful prizes - plus a delicious roast beef dinner complete with wine. And, should a player want to bring a guest for dinner, the additional cost is only $7.50.

John Roland will direct the event, with Tom Reseberry scoring and Frank Cortright, handy with his trusty bell, as timer. For information call 735-7167

Schedule of public meetings

Coastal Commission: A public hearing will be held by the coastal commission on April 19 at 7:30 p.m. to review and discuss "Geology," a report recently issued by the commission, suggesting limitation of development in areas known to be geologically hazardous. The meeting will be held at Monterey Peninsula College in Social Science Room 102.

The next regular meeting of the Central Coast Regional Commission is scheduled for April 15 at the Santa Cruz County Governmental Center at the board of supervisors chambers, 701 Ocean Street, Santa Cruz. Convening at 10 a.m., the meeting will begin with a planning and policy presentation on the Big Sur coastal planning study area.

Board of Supervisors: The board of supervisors will meet Tuesday, April 16 in the county courthouse in Salinas, beginning at 10 a.m. On the agenda for 10:15 a.m. is a hearing on possible forfeiture of a franchise by the Paradise Mutual Water Company due to their failure to pay annual fees of $100 to the county since 1966.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

In reading carefully your account of the CVPOA meeting of April 3, I noted with interest this short paragraph in the middle of your story:

" If Valley residents do decide to take part in the study," the NFS agent cautioned, " 'you'll be (operating) in the guinea pig stage. "

Is this what it was all about?

When I first became seriously interested in the CVPOA about 10 years ago, and later as director and officer, there was a great deal of talk about holding capacity of the Valley based on the master plan and a slope density formula. There has been nothing proposed or formulated since that time, in my opinion, to improve seriously the basic concept of the master plan.

It seems to me that some of the leaders of the CVPOA, as presently represented, behave like Mexican jumping beans when a little heat is applied. Calm down, good people, and concentrate on what the members, generally, i.e., the home owners, consider their principal concern. Let the county worry about its own problem and find its own corporation yard, if needed, etc.

Having quoted from the Outlook, let me quote from the national wire service's excerpt from the Supreme Court decision on communal living, April 2, as follows:

"The power of the government to act in general welfare is not confined to elimination of filth, stench and unhealthy places. It is ample to lay out zones where family values, youth values and the blessing of quiet seclusion and clean air make the area a sanctuary for people" Furthermore, "A quiet place where yards are wide, people few, and motor vechicles restricted are legitimate guidelines in a land use project addressed to family needs."

The issue was the single family dwelling ordinance. We have that in the Valley but no enforcement as those of us know who have tried to get the county to enforce this ordinance here.

So, I recommend to the officers and directors of the CVPOA that they take up issues such as communal living and let us get back to a Valley as we hoped it would be when we settled here in a single family residence area. Never mind the game plan -- forget it.

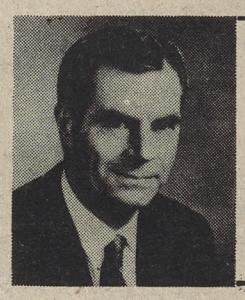
Census Bureau to probe fire loss

How prevalent are fires in the home, and what is their cost financially and in injuries to household members? These questions will be answered through a local survey during the week of April 15-19.

Mrs. Ann Bowman, interviewer, will visit several households in the Valley to secure this information in addition to gathering data on employment, which is regularly covered during the monthly surveys conducted by the Census Bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor.



Ask your Congressman

By BURT L. TALCOTT
12th District Congressman

THE "ENERGY question" continues to perplex, confuse and worry consumer and producer. All of us need more information, understanding and perspective. Simplistic answers and demogogic condemnations are neither correct nor helpful -- short range or long term.

Some "facts" are clear. All of us are consumers of energy -- cars, homes, businesses, industry, and government. Americans were consuming energy as if it were unlimited. We were profligate because we "enjoyed" cheap gasoline, oil, and electricity, day or night, fair weather or foul.

In no other country could a consumer drive a car up to a filling station in any city, at any time, and fill 'er up with 40-cent gasoline, have the oil checked, and the batteries and tires replenished. In no other country could we afford to live in "glass houses" with 25 or more electric gadgets and fixtures, plus heating and air-conditioning.

Events and circumstances which precipitated the energy crisis accumulated almost at once. Our energy demands surged upward; yet we capped oil wells; we discontinued drilling and we discouraged development by decreasing depletion allowances. Refineries soon began moving out of the country.

America needed energy, and still, nuclear power plant installations were inhibited; pipeline construction was delayed; government regulations mandated anti-pollution devices which required more energy.

Federal regulations also forced various industries to use oil rather than the plentiful supplies of coal available to them and this action precipitated the closing of mines while increasing production costs so that reliance on foreign imports became necessary.

In addition, government price controls, and the threat of such controls, convinced producers to seek markets overseas where there were no price limits.

All of us must also share the blame for the advent of the crisis although most have responded commendably to the short term need for conservation of fuel by "dialing down" thermostats and sacrificing other comforts. Most people tolerated the inconveniences admirably.

Our area, because of the widespread disparity of need, could have suffered heavily, but we were able to obtain quick and fair consideration of various special needs.

THE "PROBLEM" and the "crisis" will persist as an ongoing condition and challenge. The lifting of the oil embargo is a political act -- production is what really counts. We should not become euphoric about a diplomatic function until it is converted into an industrial and economic reality.

We must continue to consume less. We must be more frugal and efficient in our energy consumption. Broad technological and attitudinal changes must be accomplished and accepted.

We can't retract our hard-won environmental gains, but we must consider economic as well as environmental needs. Better balance can be achieved.

The free market (without monopoly and foreign political blackmail) combined with increased research and development, taxes to prevent "windfall profits at the expense of the defenseless consumer" while encouraging fair profits and development, and individual conservation can prevent another crisis.

EMERGENCIES

April 6, 7:30 p.m.: Harry Schultz, of Via La Gitana, medical emergency victim, was assisted.

April 7, 5:09 p.m.: Phil Thomas, of Carmel, was given medical assistance.

April 7, 5:30 p.m.: Lin Rittenauer, of Carmel Valley, was transported to Community Hospital following a motorcycle accident.

April 8, 2:48 p.m.: Louise Childs, of Carmel Valley, medical emergency victim, was transported to Community Hospital.

THE SYLVAN tranquility of Carmel Valley has been threatened by development at the west end, stated members of the CVPOA during the coastal commission meeting held this week in Monterey.

Carmel Valley residents urge development limitations

RESIDENTS of the Del Monte Forest, the Carmel zone of influence, including Carmel Valley, and the region from Point Lobos to Malpaso Creek generally recommended no increase in development in their respective areas at Monday's meeting of the Central Coast Regional Coastal Zone Conservation Commission.

The commission's planning committee received input from many interested citizens on planning for the future of the central California coast area.

The eight-hour work session, held in Monterey City Hall council chambers, attracted a full audience throughout the day. Coast Commissioner Frank Lodato moderated the discussion. He emphasized that the meeting would not decide anything, but was designed instead to allow as informal discussion.

Dolores Anderson, representing the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said she thought a halt should be called to the "tremendous development" that has been allowed at the mouth of Carmel Valley. She likened the Valley to a bottle that is being plugged by development at the west end.

"We need somebody's protective wings over us," she said, and she acknowledged that most Valley residents would like to remain an unincorporated area.

"I don't believe the building of a dam on Carmel River is going to open up Pandora's box," she said.

Mrs. Anderson also favored "some alleviation of the traffic congestion on Highway 1" and development of a recreation area in the Valley as a picnic site.

The commission will be drafting a plan in 1975 for future development of the central coast region, based in large part on the input it receives from citizens in the local communities.

"All we're doing is looking at various alternatives in each area from a local, state, and regional standpoint," Lodato said. Maximum, moderate, and no growth alternatives for each major area between the Salinas River and Malpaso Creek was discussed.

Will Shaw, architect and planning consultant for Del Monte Properties Co. outlined the areas in the Del Monte Forest that are prospective sites for development. He said about 50 new residential units are built each year in the Forest. There are about 2,000 residential sites, some undeveloped, on the 5,000 Forest acres.

Of the 9.1 miles along the shore, about 6.3 are preserved as golf course open space. Shaw declared that Del Monte Properties is and always has been concerned about maintaining slow, limited commercial growth consistent with a reasonable profit on investment.

Ann Peterson of the Forest Committee and Gen. H. J. Carns (ret.) of the Del Monte Forest Home Owners Association, recommended less growth in the Forest and a revision of the 1966 Del Monte Forest Master Plan.

Mrs. Peterson said the Morse Botanical Preserve and pygmy forest should not be endangered, nor the Indian Village picnic area, and less density should be allowed on the Macomber, Spruance, and Spanish Bay tracts which are scheduled for eventual development.

"Greater open space is needed if the Forest character is to be maintained," she said. Carns said his organization favors limiting construction in the Forest and increasing open space so that the Forest population, would not create sewage and traffic problems in future years.

"We do not want to see it (the Forest) inadvertently destroyed, he said. Neither rapid nor slow development is desirable, said Carns.

Forest resident Rudd Crawford said he hopes the state would purchase the marsh area north of Asilomar for a wildlife refuge and so preserve the land for open space.

The Morse Preserve should not be divided in two sections because of the rare flora there, said Crawford. He also proposed limiting the size of the turnout roads along the shoreline in the Forest.

A representative of the Audubon Society, and Vern Yadon, curator of the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, supported Crawford's suggestion for preservation of the march area.

County Planning Director Ed DeMars announced that meetings are still being held with representatives of the Del Monte Properties Co., the Forest Committee and the Del Monte Home Owners Association to talk about updating the 1966 Del Monte Forest Master Plan.

"I have great hopes that it will be something worthwhile when the final recommendation on a plan is forwarded to the county planning commission for consideration," he said.

CARMEL Planning Director Robert Griggs said several issues are of interest to residents in the Carmel area, including the Hatton Canyon freeway proposal, flood plain problems, concern over the adequacy of water supply, sewage disposal alternatives, and public purchase of the Odello artichoke fields for open space.

Francis Herrick, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, described his organization as dedicated to the preservation of the residential area in and around Carmel.

He recommended careful consideration before any development is allowed near the Carmel River flood plain.

A woman, describing herself as "a refugee from San Francisco" and now a resident of Carmel Valley, spoke against the Hatton Canyon freeway and proposed less reliance on that "monster" the automobile.

The Audubon Society representative said: "One of the most serious questions is water supply. A dam on the Carmel River will bring about increased pressure for development in the Carmel area."

She advocated keeping private and public coast land in uses "compatible with natural conditions."

A representative of the League of Women Voters said the area in Carmel's zone of influence has a "limited capacity to support increased population."

"This is no place for intensive recreational development," though the demand for such uses is increasing."

To consider golf courses as open space is deceptive, she said. About 7 percent of the water that the California-American Water Co. provides goes to golf course maintenance.

She urged better public transportation.

Robert Speers, representing the 14-member Highlands-Bixby Advisory Committee, recommended no underwater park for Carmel because people already have access to the shoreline, he said.

Geologic hazards to development outlined

A variety of natural hazards to development along the coastal and immediate inland areas surrounding Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula are pinpointed in "Geology," a new publication issued by the Central Coast Regional Coastal Zone Conservation Commission.

The report proposes immediate steps be taken to preclude development in known hazard areas in the coastal zone unless a team of experts has analyzed the risks and has designed the development to eliminate them.

The coastal commission will hold a public hearing on the report and its recommendation at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 19 at Monterey Peninsula College, in Social Science Room 102.

One of the ever-present geologic hazards in the coastal region which is identified in the report is the Seal Cove-San Gregorio-Palo Colorado fault zone which branches off the San Andres fault at Bolinas Lagoon and extends southeastward toward the Monterey Peninsula.

"Recent minor seismicity, young geomorphic fault features, offsets of geologically young sedimentary deposits, and close relationship to the San Andreas fault indicate that this is an active fault zone," the report states.

"The length of this fault zone and its activity suggest that earthquakes as large as magnitude 7 (plus or minus .5) can be expected from movements along this fault zone."

The report also says the coastal areas of San Mateo, Santa Cruz and Monterey Counties will continue to experience damaging intensities from earthquakes generated on faults outside the immediate area, as well as from local faults.

"Small and intermediate earthquakes capable of causing local damage in the coastal zone can be expected from minor faults throughout the coastal ranges of San Mateo, Santa Cruz and Monterey Counties, as well as from the San Andreas, Seal Cove-San Gregorio-Palo Colorado, and Monterey Bay faults," the report says.

"Historical records indicate that these earthquakes will occur much more frequently than major earthquakes, but, again, there is presently no way to predict their frequency and location."

Liquefaction of the ground in extremely strong earthquakes is also discussed.

The coastal commisssion report recommends that any construction that proceeds in such areas of possible geologic hazard without the proper safeguards be denied any publicly-supported relief in the event of subsequent damage or loss.

INCORPORATION STUDY

Uttered aloud, the mere word "incorporation" is apt to raise hackles and start the shouting in any rapidly growing small community such as Carmel Valley.

Each time a group of residents professes dissatisfaction with the county's administration in some type of community service, the question of incorporation arises. As a topic of argument it is therefore perennial, but in Carmel Valley to date the arguments have been based, necessarily, entirely on conjecture.

Within the next couple of months, however, Carmel Valleyites will have the privilege of arguing on a more informed basis.

On April 14, an intern in public affairs with Coro Foundation will come to Carmel Valley to spend six weeks making a study on the pros and cons of incorporation.

PROPOSAL FOR FINANCING OF PARKLANDS

"Generous and interesting" is how Area Planning Commission Keith Evans described proposals made by Dudley Swim for the acquistion of land for scenic conservation in Lower Carmel Valley and the Jack's Peak Area.

Mr. Evans received the proposals, including one recommending that a foundation be formed to acquire properties desirable for conservation, in a letter presented to him by Rear Admiral C. Tod Singleton who is chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Conservation.

In his letter, Mr. Swim offered a donation of $100,000 to buy 55 acres on Jack's Peak on condition that part of this acreage be a site for the new Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

WARNING TO T.V. AND MOVIE INDUSTRY

You can make moving pictures in our county, but you cannot annoy the residents, the board of supervisors told the Hollywood movie and television industry.

The board edict came as the result of a complaint from Ansel Adams and Richard F. McGraw, of Carmel, against low-flying aircraft.

Supervisor Loren E. Smith asked what jurisdiction the county had over its airspace, and County Counsel William H. Stoffers answered "none."

"We do not control the air," Chairman Willard Branson said, "but we do control the county roads." Supervisors agreed this would be their weapon against movie or television nuisances.

DRAINAGE STUDY PLANNED FOR CARMEL RIVER

A priority list country drainage studies, with the Carmel River east from Laureles Grade and Sant Rita Creek given first rating, has been approved by the County Board of Supervisors.

Loran Bunte, Jr., flood control department chief, said the studies will show the amount of flow to be expected, so that subdivisions, the road department and other bodies involved in drainage control can make plans for construction.

REPAIRS ON CARMEL VALLEY ROAD STILL UNCERTAIN

No time can yet be set for repairing damage to Carmel Valley Road, west of Laureles Grade, nor can a firm estimate be made of the cost of doing the work, it was reported to the County Board of Supervisors.

Board Chairman Willard T. Branson asked Bruce W. McClain, road department head, for his "prognosis" on the big washout below Wagon Wheel, and McClain answered: "My prognosis is that it will be expensive."

Pressed for an estimate of the cost, McClain said the present estimate is under $100,000. He added: "I think when we getdown to figuring what fill will be required, it will be quite a bit more."

WELCOME WAGON OBSERVES 41st ANNIVERSARY

Welcome Wagon International is observing the 41st anniversary, April 13-17, of its founding as an organization dedicated to the family, social welfare, national defense, and civic progress. The General Store is WW's newest sponsor in Carmel Valley.

The Welcome Wagon hostess is a friendly link between her community and the newcomer, easing the over-burdening difficulities of establishing a new family living pattern.

PLANNERS RECOMMEND LIMIT ON COMMERCIAL AREA

A recommended policy to guide the future use of commercially zoned property in Carmel Valley Village was abopted by the Monterey County Planning Commission yesterday and sent on to the board of supervisors for final approval.

The series of five recommendations about the basic Village ware was made by a Village Study Advisory Committee, appointed last summer by the planning commission to review development guidelines.

The six months study was triggered by an application by Harry Bell for a use permit to construct 84 senior citizens' apartments on an eight-acre parcel of commercially zoned land behind the Carmel Valley Post Office.

Valley churches to celebrate Easter Sunday

St. Phillip's Lutheran Church

St. Philip's Lutheran Church of Carmel will hold its Easter Sunday service at 9 a.m. The Rev. Walter J. Vrudny will speak on "The Easter Miracle."

During the Eucharist celebration, Wayne and Sharon McMillan will sing "Mighty God," accompanying themselves on the guitar.

Refreshments will be offered following the service.

Our Lady of Mt. Carmel

Our Lady of Mt. Carmel will hold special Easter services this weekend. An Easter Paschal Vigil will be held at 5:45 on Saturday evening. Father Douglas F. Keating will deliver the sermon at 9 a.m. and at noon on Sunday.

St. Dunstan's Church

The Rev. James Brock has planned two Easter morning services at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church to follow holy communion at 8 a.m.

A festival Eucharist will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m., with the flowering of the cross tradition observed. The church choir will sing anthems.

Following the service, children will receive plants for their own gardens.

Community Church

"Resurrection: ghost or reality?" will be the topic of Rev. Howard E. Bull's sermon this Easter Sunday at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

The chancel choir will sing an anthem during the worship services to be offered at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m., with a special presentation by the children's choir during the first service.

Sunday school will be held during the early service only, and the nursery will operate throughout the morning.

May flower show

"The Age of Aquarius" will be the theme of Carmel Valley Garden Association's 14th annual Flower Show, May 4 and 5 in the Tularcitos multipurpose room. Chairman Harry Ball and Vice-Chairman Harold Maynard invite all junior and senior gardeners of the area to participate in the two-day event. Competition, with prizes offered in 32 divisions. Judging of the poster contest publicizing the show was completed last week, and prizes were awarded to five Tularcitos students.

Junior arrangements in the flower show are open to young people in primary through grade 10. Catergories are:

"Aries" -- the ram (grades 7-10); color: red; legend: independent, pioneering spirt; a scene within 20 inches suggesting pioneering, with red flowers predominant.

"Pisces" -- the fish (primary through grade 3); colors: shades of violet; legend: artistically talented and mystic; violet flowers of various shades in a fish container or suggesting same.

"Capricorn" -- goat and part fish (grades 4 through 7); colors: dark green, brown and black; legend: hard-working and likes money; a wall panel of dried material suggesting the sign and colors above, not to exceed 12 by 18 inches.

Reservations must be made between April 23 and May 2 for flower arrangement exhibit space, according to Mrs. Harold Maynard, division chairman, who will accept calls at 659-4729. Also ready to accept reservations is Mrs. Stanley Roberts at 659-2322. Exhibitors may enter three arrangements in this division. Categories are:

"Aquarius" -- the water bearer; colors: blue, green and violet; legend: kind, intuitive.

waterbearer: arrangement in a water container.

fountain of Love: flowers suggesting a fountain.

"Taurus" -- the bull; color: blue; legend: strong, determined and conservative; bold massive arrangement.

"Gemini" -- the twins; colors: silver and gray; legend: intelligent and likes to travel; dried arrangement in twin or double containers.

"Cancer" -- the crab; colors: silver and white; legend: domestic and loves antiques;

--heritage: tall arrangement in antique container.

--the lowly crab: low arrangement with pebbles or marbles; crab environment.

"Leo" -- the lion; colors: gold and orange; legend: born leader and generous.

--safari: suggesting hot sun of tropics.

--in the bush: imaginative hunting scene with accessories.

"Virgo" -- the virgin; colors: copper and gray; legend: organized and practical.

--to the stars: ethereal; white.

--Our Lady: copper container with figurine.

"Libra" -- the scales; colors: pastel blue and green; legend: well-balanced and showing good judgement.

--in the balance: using scales.

--better judgment: two containers.

"Scorpio" -- the scorpion; color: dark red; legend: witty with lots of animal magnetism.

--love betrayed: other thorny material, imaginatively used.

"Sagittarius" -- the archer; colors: purple and saphire blue; legend: happy, self reliant; miniature arrangement, not to exceed 5 inches, width and height.

Brochures detailing rules are available at nurseries and numerous Valley businesses. For further information, call Mrs. Clyde (Beth) Hitchcock, president of the Carmel Valley Garden Association (659-2112).

Visitor from Washington, D.C.

Jacqueline Marie Roberts, of Washington, D.C. was the house guest of the Joseph Candler Hutchinsons, of Country Club Drive, during her spring vacation. Jackie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Roberts and the granddaughter of the late Bishop Baker Pearl, of the AME Church in Santa Monica and of Mrs. Pearl, now residing in Connecticut.

Jackie came to the Monterey Peninsula with her parents as a young girl, but his is her first visit to Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Hutchinson and Mrs. Mitko Nedeff, also a Valleyite, served champagne in the Mother's Boutique, preceding the fashion show at the Santa Catalina School, and then joined Mr. Nedeff and Junie, Jody, Jackie Nicki for dessert. With their guest, they attended the production of "Hair" at Monterey Peninsula College and the C.V. Trail and Saddle Club Spring Horse Show.

Jackie is a student at the Georgetown Day School in Washington, D.C. and plans to become a lawyer. With Mrs. Hutchinson, she visited classes at the Monterey College of Law, located at MIFS, and attended a class in contracts, taught by Dennis Powell, of Boronda Road.
Road.

After a trip to San Francisco to ride a cable car, Jackie returned to Washington early this week.

Cancer Crusade ends

"An old oak leaf cluster" to Upper Carmel Valley Residential Chairman, Mrs. Norman (Doris) Bundgard who, with a mighty crew of volunteers, has successfully completed the 1974 door to door Cancer Crusade.

Area captains included Mrs. Joan Bennett, Mrs. James Cecka, Mrs. George Brehmer, Mrs. John Conklin, Mrs. Clifford Bolgard, Mrs. John Woods, and Mrs. Thomas McKiernon.

Also assisting were Mmes. Richard Kern, William Jackson, Ray Lindsay, James Goold, William Wood, Rudolph Bautz, Francis Dane, Jack Granoff, Harry Haimoff, Fred Boehme, Dianne Nottenkamper, Charles Rose, Hazel Hickman, Bettie O'Neil, Helen Crow, Kermit Gayman, Jane Barelli, Alice Broberg, Lucy Smithson, Peggy Arnold and Nancy Hardesty.

Anyone who did not receive a house call or envelope is requested to mail a donation to the American Cancer Society, 246 Pearl Street, Monterey, Ca. 93940.

Guests from Cape Cod

Mr. and Mrs. James Goold and two children of Buena Vista Del Rio said good-bye to Tracy's parents last weekend following a three-week reunion in Carmel Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones ended their California visit with a 41st wedding anninversary celebration in San Francisco before returning to their home in Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

A cousin, Mrs. Hazel Ann Burnett, flew down from her home in Seattle to greet the eastern couple, who toured the northern part of the state for three days in a mobile home with Jim's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Vernon Goold, of Fremont. The drive to the Pinnacles, to Fisherman's Wharf, through the farm country of the Salinas Valley, a luncheon at Nepenthe, and a birthday celebration for Jim at Will's Fargo all made for memories of happy times with their daughter and family in Robles Del Rio.

Awards for Student Speaker Contest

Carmel Valley Lions Club representatives watched with pride as their student speaker constestant, Ted Wedlake, received the Region finalist award at the Pine Inn in Carmel last Thursday evening.

Ted is a student at Robert Louis Stevenson and the son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward H. Wedlake of Carmel Valley.

Judges selected Elizabeth ("Liz") Johnson to represent the region at Los Gatos on April 17 at 7:30 p.m. Miss Johnson was sponsored by the Pacific Grove -- New Monterey Club and was coached by Mr. Nace of Monterey Peninsula College.

Ted's supporters attending from the Valley were his parents, his coach and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Kester, Clifford Bolgard, chairman of the speakers for the local club, Mr. and Mrs. Richard McKenzie and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gansel.

Swimmer awarded academic honors

A note from Joe Sherman, director of Information Services at Southern Methodist university, brings news of James L. Heiland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Heiland, of East Garzas Road. Of the 2,000 students who received recognition for their academic achievements during the past semester, our Valleyite, with a 3.6 grade point average, was awarded the highest honor in business administration upon his nomination for Beta Gamma Sigma (the business equivalant of Phi Beta Kappa.)

A former swim star at Monterey High School, Jim now swims for S.M.U., qualifying for the National AAU Championships last year in Hershey, Pa. Jim missed the 1974 Nationals last weekend because of a shoulder injury.

With his wife, Dee Dee, he will be returning home after graduation ceremonies in May to enter business with his father at the Bell Magazine Agency in Sand City.

Youth Center improvement day

Completion of a project undertaken seven years ago was just one of the items of the work sheet at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center last week. A "temporary" retaining wall of plywood, braced with three-foot spikes along the walkway into the Community Center Swimming Pool building was at last replaced with lenghts of telephone poles, donated to the center by Bob Macy, supervisor of the PG&E service yard, located, until recently, on Del Fino Place and Pilot Road.

The poles also were spaced around the picnic area directly behind the Community Center. The area is now inviting, with three picnic tables, five new pines, and an interesting CV Garden Club succulent garden.

Kiwanis Club of Carmel Valley, were planted in surrounding areas by the volunteers. Begun on Sunday, the job was completed on Monday with the assistance of Boy Scout representatives Alex Rembert and Mike Barnes.

The heavy digging equipment for the major project was donated by Russ Murray, who was assisted by his son, Shane. Dr. and Mrs. Dale Buche, chairmen of Center-Pool Improvement project, were assisted by their children Brock, Brent, Kurt, Kirsten, and Kier. Also helping were members of the center board, families and friends including Mr. and Mrs. Dick Klingensmith, with Kathy, Rich, and Jenny; Dick McKenzie and David; Mrs. John Von Berg; Charles Gansel; Phil Wright; Alex Rembert; Jim Luttrell; and Mrs. Mildred Hattan, with Rogue, Scarlett, Shane, and Garth.

At last the Village area has a picnic area. Plan to visit it soon.

Padre wrestling awards banquet

An awards banquet, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jim Brock, assisted by other parents, recently honored members of the Carmel High School wrestling team.

Following the potluck dinner, coach Bob Walthour was thanked for his many hours spent traing the Padres with the presentation of a humourous "Bald Eagle Award," accompanied by a handsome engraved silver stein.

Plaques and trophies were presented to the following varsity wrestlers: Mike Brock (CV) -- "Most Valuable Wrestler; Rich Fleming (CV) -- dedication; Rich Sinclair (CV) -- sportsmanship; Jim Challis (C) -- most inspirational; Jeff Ryan (CV) -- most improved.

Peninsula garden clubs unite

The Monterey Peninsula Garden Club is hosting 24 garden and allied clubs on April 18 at 8 p.m. in the Pacific Grove Community Center, 515 Junipero Avenue.

The purpose of the meeting is to better understand the work of the Regional Coastal Zone Conservation Commission, which is charged by the State with the preservation of our coastline.

Speakers will include Charles B. Kramer, chairman of this region, well-known for his previous work in Citizens for Clean Air and as advisor to Air Pollution Control Fred Farr, member of the state conservation commission and previously state senator and national chairman for Highway Beautification and Mrs. Ruth Anderson, well-known scientist and member of the Coastal Commission will also address the audience.

Groups which will be presented at the meeting include: Carmel Valley Garden Association, Monterey Peninsula Men's Garden Society, Cypress Garden Guild, Junior Garden Club, Robert Down School, PG, Monterey Peninsula Landscape Garden Association, Pacific Grove Museum of National History, Friends of the Sea Otter, Pacific Grove Women's Civic Club, Pacific Grove Business and Professional Women's Club, California Native Plant Society, Inc., Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Begonia Society, The Bonsai Club, The Monterey Bonsai Club, Col. Burns Bonsai Club, Salinas Council of Garden Clubs, County Gardeners, Amigos de Los Flores, Citywide Garden Club, Vista Garden Club, La Selva Garden Club, Gardeners Unlimited, Watsonville Women's Club, Garden Section, and the Santa Cruz Orchid Society.

Little League work day

"Bring the whole family--moms to help clean the snack bar and dads to work on the field to get it in shape for the season opener." So goes the invitation from Carmel Valley Little League President, Dick Klingensmith, who has scheduled Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m., as a Work Day at the Paso Hondo Baseball Park.

Little League 1974 is rapidly approching opening day. Teams have been formed, and managers and coaches are holding practice sessions to work out the winter kinks. The boys are eagerly awaiting the first game of the season scheduled for Saturday, April 20.

Following opening day ceremonies at 12 p.m., the season opener at 1 p.m. will feature the Tigers vs. the Volunteers. The nightcap will follow, pitting last year's champion Wild Cats against the Indians.

Said Klingensmith, "We have been very fortunate this year to again get some outstanding men to work with the Little League as managers and coaches. Our sincere thanks to those who volunteer their time to work with the boys. We still need one manager and coach for the Pirates. Anyone interested, please call Bill Conlan, Sr., 659-2105 or me, 659-2398."

Farm League coaches and managers are: Ron Cloyd, manager for "Wolfpack;" Mike Newton, manager, and Noel Binford, coach for the "Hornets;" Ron Alexander, manager, and Chuck Solomone, coach for the "Toros;" Ralph Baudour, manager, and Ed Foote, coach for the "Cubs;" and the "Pirates" need volunteers. Won't you help with this team?

WHY IS everyone smiling? Because the Carmel Youth Center's Annual Pancake Breakfast and Easter Egg Hunt is eagerly anticipated. The event will be held this Sunday from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. Volunteers who will help to prepare the food are from left to right: Elio Chiappe, Tom Broadbent, Renice Medkeff, Lynn Bua, Diane Alvarado, Nick Limov, Peter (Tersol) Rabbit, and Youth Center President John Cherry. Call 624-3285 for tickets.

Natural Development open house

If you were not among the 300-plus guests who visited Warren Kaufman's open house last weekend at 23 Paso Cresta, you will have another opportunity this weekend, when the Natural Development home will be shown from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The large display of remodeling, as well as the home's many unique features, last week drew a great deal of interest from visitors who consumed huge quantities of homemade cookies and exotic cheeses.

Fresh pastries and cheeses will be supplied again this week, and French antiques will be displayed by Ted Harris. Peterson Conway, of Carmel, will exhibit Persian carpets.

The house will be filled once again with Nancy Dice's house plants from her unique Valley business, "The Dice Plant Cometh." Nancy has a house plant consultant and sitting service.

THE ORGANIC GARDENER
In Carmel Valley
By Lee Hall

Artichokes are perennials that do well in this area. They love organic fertilizer of manure and wood ashes or compost and wood ashes. They tolerate summer fog very well. In fact, they seem to thrive on it.

Usually, artichokes are started from slips. The easiest way to get slips is from established plants, if available. A shovel is inserted between the outside plant and the parent plants. The slip separates readily about three or four inches down. Sometimes the slip will have roots on it, but sometimes it won't. In either case the leaves should be trimmed back, leaving only one or two small center leaves.

The slip should be planted in good quality soil and 'watered in.' It is best if shade is furnished during the middle of the day for a few days. The slip should be watered daily until it starts to grow, usually within a week to ten days.

The big hazard with beginning artichokes is that gophers love them.A chicken wire mesh basket should be placed in the hole if gophers are a problem. The mesh should extend an inch above the ground as well so that gophers won't be able to go over the top. A bottom is not needed if the lower part of the mesh is a foot under ground. The second and subsequent year the plants will be large enough to withstand gopher attacks.

Artichoke slips planted through April will put out one stalk, usually. So one artichoke per plant will be the harvest the first year. During second and subsequent years, the yield will be a dozen to three dozen artichokes per plant. Thus a total of four plants should produce enough for a family of four (plus a few neighbors) at the height of the season. After the third year, excess slips will have to be cut off, otherwise the yield will be larger in number but the artichokes will be considerably smaller. As soon as the artichokes quit producing (in early summer locally), the plants should be allowed to die down. When they are completely brown all the top growth is cut down leaving a few short stubs if anything above ground. Fall rains will start 'greening' them again. Irrigation will be necessary only if spring rains stop too early before the artichokes are ready to pick. If this is the case the plants will signify thirst by wilting usually of the bottom leaves first.

Recently, we tried to stagger the harvest of six plants by starting to water two in July, two in August and waiting for rain for the last two. Unfortunately, it appears that they were all in about the same state of development as of last March.

We put on a generous layer of compost (manure) around the plants in the early fall and wood ashes in late fall, just as they start to put on new growth.

Asparagus is another perennial that does well locally. The disadvantage of asparagus is that none of the plants should be cut during the first year and only one cutting should be made during the second year.

Asparagus can actually be harvested in the third and subsequent years. The great advantage of this plant is that it continues to produce for fifteen or twenty years.

Asparagus is usually started from roots. If it is started from seed, another year must be added for a full harvest.

Asparagus a lot of trouble to establish and some people feel it's not worth the bother. It is worth the trouble and time to devotees because organically grown aspapagus is delicious and prolific. Unless rich organic soil is available a trench one-foot deep by one-foot wide should be dug using a rototiller, if available. (Using a digging fork or shovel makes for hard work.)

The proper spacing requirements call for one plant every two feet. Thus, a trench 50 feet long for 25 plants will yield a minimum amount for a family of four. If gophers are a problem the trench should be lined with chicken wire. Unfortunately, gophers love asparagus.

Mounds of top soil, compost and or aged manure should be shoveled in every two feet with each mound about six inches high. The roots should be spread around the mound with the crown on the top. Moist top soil and compost are used to cover the roots and crown about two inches deep. Wood ashes or lime should be sprinkled over the soil and between the mounds. The trench should then be filled with top soil covered with a light layer of compost.

The second and third year, more compost and top soil should be added so that by full harvest time, the crowns are buried about five inches deep, leaving about an inch depression for water holding. More wood ashes or lime can be used on asparagus than on nearly any other plant since asparagus favors a very basic soil (pH of 8).

In the first year, the plants should be allowed to maintain their fern-like top growth. When the top growth dies down in the fall, the tops should be cut to ground level. Winter rains will bring the sprouts up in late February. Sprouts should be cut for about six weeks before allowing top growth to continue.

Health department to provide rabies vaccinations

To ensure protection in Monterey County against rabies, the Monterey County Health Department and the local Veterinary Medical Association will conduct a month-long series of reduced fee rabies vaccination clinics in Carmel Valley and various other locations on the Peninsula throughout May.

One simple, safe injection of vaccine provides protection for two years, according to health department officials, and will be available at the scheduled clinics for $2. As a convenience to owners, dog licenses for 1974-75 may also be obtained at the clinics. Vaccinations and licenses are required in Monterey County for all dogs four months of age or older.

A clinic in Carmel Valley is scheduled for Friday, May 3, from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Fire Station on Via Contenta. Other nearby clinics will be held on Tuesday, April 30 from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the police station parking area on 4th and Junipero in Carmel, and on Monday, May 6 from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Lighthouse Gate in Pebble Beach. Information regarding other dates and locations can be obtained by the phoning the health department at 373-0111.

An unvaccinated dog is a health hazard to the owner, his family and neighbors in an area like Monterey County, where rabies is endemic in wildlife, according to James D. Russell, D.V.M., recently appointed public health veterinarian. Rabid wild animals are known to attack dogs on their home ground. Thus, it is even possible for pets which never wander to become infected.

Children's marathon for world health

More than 250 children of all ages, many from Carmel and Carmel Valley, turned out to participate in Project Concern's 20-mile walk for charity last Saturday.

This event, which was last held in November of 1972, provides money for Project Concern's worldwide non-profit medical and dental assistance program.

About 20 per cent of the total money that is raised will go to local charities.

Report cites batch plant noise problems

The Carmel Valley Concrete Company has applied to the county planning department for the reclassification of a two-acre site in Martin Canyon in Carmel Valley to allow construction and operation of a commercial concrete batch plant.

The 16-year-old concrete company, owned by Keeto Azcarate, had until recently been operating a batch plant one mile east of the site presently under consideration under a variance. A change in the law, made a few years ago, limiting variances for commercial sites rendered subsequent operation of the plant illegal, according to planning department officials.

An environmental impact report for public review has been filed by the company in compliance with county regulations. A public hearing on the report will be held by the planning commission on May 5.

According to the report, the primary adverse effects anticipated are increased noise levels primarily from trucks, and removal of trees and vegetation.

The proposed project does not presently fit either the Monterey County General Plan or the Carmel Valley Master Plan. The zoning of the proposed site, currently residential-agricultural would have to be changed to a general commercial or industrial classification. The company is requesting the former, which is the more restrictive in terms of permitted uses.

The anticipated increase in noise from 35-45 DBA to a daily level of 90-95 DBA would result from the necessary transporting of materials used in concrete. Deliveries at the plant are expected to average three to four loads daily. Two loads of cement per week are expected to be brought to the site in closed tank-type trucks.

In order to minimize the impact of the increased noise level, land cut and fill and removal of trees, the company has proposed to locate the plant "in an isolated area, almost totally hidden from public view," according to the report.

Immediately adjacent to the Martin Canyon site is the Del Mesa Carmel subdivision, and across Carmel Valley Road are the Carmel Hacienda subdivision and Carmel School.

The company anticipates that "the heavy tree cover surrounding slopes and the isolated location will reduce the noise from the neighbors or general public."

The company has also proposed the planting of trees to provide a screen between the plant and a potential future road.

Obituary

Alfred F. Firmin

Alfred F. Firmin died last Friday at the age of 91 in Carmel Valley Manor following a period of waning health.

He lived in Carmel and Carmel Valley for 26 years after a 35-year career as a land and timber manager for Weyerhauser Lumber Company of Tacoma, Wash. A member of the Carmel High 12 Club, he also participated in the Free Masonic Lodge of Tacoma.

Mr. Firmin is survived by his daughter, Rhoda B. Whittlesey, of Portland, Oregon.; his son, John B. Firmin, of Bellevue, Wash., four grandchildren and six greatgrandchildren. His wife, Wilhemina, died ten years ago.

Services at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea were to be held Wednesday followed by private inurnment in El Carmelo Cemetary. Scheduled to officiate was Florence K. Payne, reader of the First Church of Christ. The Paul Mortuary handled arrangements.

Landromat use permit to be reviewed today

It appears likely that efforts to establish the operation of a laundromat in the Village area of Carmel Valley will be brought to an abrupt halt during a hearing before the zoning administrator today.

A use permit granted by the planning commission on March 15, 1974 will be reviewed at the meeting for apparent environmental and procedural inaccuracies.

The use permit for stores and offices on the Village site, where construction is nearing completion, was improperly granted prior to approval of a septic tank by the Health Department, which has indicated that it will rescind its approval during the hearing today.

"There are numerous septic tank problems in this area, particularly on a lot of only 9,000 square feet. It would appear to me that someone jumped the gun," Supervisor Willard T. Branson stated during an interview yesterday.

Branson cited inaccuracies in the amount of waste water projected in the report, submitted by engineers for the project. According to the figures listed 1,680 gallons of water per day would be used during the operation of the 12 machines. Recent investigation by county officials has disclosed the possibility that water usage could reach 20,000 gallons of water per day, with washing machines operating at two cycles per hour.

Discussion at a recent meeting of the Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association had focussed on the drainage problems involved in the operation of a laundromat on this particular site. Board members John Sigourney and Bill Brown declared the project environmentally disastrous, while Mrs. George Nye, in attendance, objected to the degradation of "the charming and historic part of our Village."

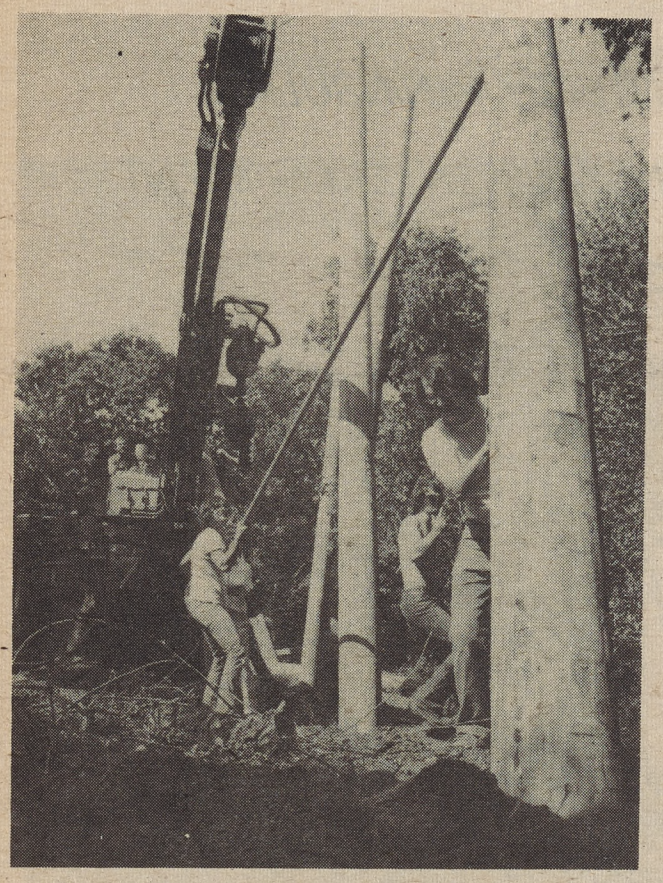
Building in harmony with the hills



"WE WANTED something which would let us put houses on hillsides so that the flat land could be saved for the cows and chipmunks," explains Noel Binford of Stone, Post & Flower. So, their designers came up with their trademark post construction. A foundation of pressure-treated building poles embedded in concrete caissons provides a stable support for homes on steep slopes, while avoiding the environmentally hazardous practice of cutting and filling. Photos by Larry Crawford.

'Dropping poles' for ecologically sound houses

"People are beginning to suspect that the greatest freedom is not achieved by sheer irresponsibility. The earth is common ground and we are its overlords, whether we hold title or not.

"Gradually, the idea is taking form that the land must be held in safe keeping, that one generation is to some extent responsible to the next, and that it is contrary to the public good to allow an individual to destroy almost beyond repair any part of the soil or the water or the view."

These words of E.B. White were quoted five years ago, during an exhibit at the Tantamount Theater, to summarize the philosophy of Stone, Post & Flower, a Carmel Valley firm which designs and builds local homes.

Sensitive to the environmental needs and esthetic value of the Valley, this group of carpenters, landscape designers, stone masons and artists has formed during the last six years to specialize in ecologically sound hillside building.

Firmly against grading, unnecessary road construction and over-development of Carmel Valley's flat land, Stone, Post & Flower has created designs which keep the bulldozer in the garage.

Cutting, filling, and removing trees are unnecessary, according to workers in this organization, which originated as a garden landscaping business, begun in 1966 by Ilbert Tucker, presently manager and president of the corporation.

A key to the group's success is its unusual foundation design. Pressure-treated building poles of Douglas fir, embedded in concrete caissons, are dropped into the ground to provide structural support, extending vertically throughout each Stone, Post & Flower house.

Injected with pentachloraphenol, a chemical which invades each cell of the tree and then crystalizes, the wood is, in a sense, petrified, becoming permanently strong and bug-resistant.

While post foundations appear somewhat unconventional, they are likely to stand up better than traditionally designed houses during earthquakes, according to Noel Binford, production manager. This is due to the ability of the poles to give rather than crack, as might concrete or masonry.

By using pole foundations, Stone, Post & Flower is able to leave hillside building sites essentially intact, designing around existing trees rather than removing them, and constructing well above vegetation, rather than eliminating it.

With root systems undisturbed, the hillsides remain more ecologically stable than can be expected when foundations rest on pads of land, formed by the loosening and reshuffling of earth.

The pole foundation design enables Stone, Post & Flower to build on steep hillsides, providing spectacular views of the Valley as well as preserving flat lands for other, less environmentally destructive uses.

"We have built on slopes of up to 70 per cent so far," says Production Manager Roger Grafstein, "and we can probably build on a 100 per cent slope," (equivalent to a 45 degree angle.)

Outdoor decks, an integral part of these post houses, provide accessible outdoor living space, even on the steepest of slopes. The spontaneous urge to step outside is encouraged by the design of separate entrances to decks on different levels within one house--from living room, bathroom and bedroom.

Through extensive use of large windows, sliding glass doors and delicate stained glass panels, sunlight pours into the houses, creating natural warmth, supplemented by large fireplaces, often occupying complete walls.

Designed with a bold hand, many Stone, Post & Flower houses in Carmel Valley are roofed with Gothic domes or gently angled gables, creating subtle and dynamic interactions between the buildings and surrounding hillsides.

For example, a surprisingly vast window area, reaching a height of 20 feet at one end of the bedroom, offset by a conventional wall with 15 foot ceiling on the opposite side of the room, somewhat magically incorporates the vigor and beauty of the outdoors within a small bedroom in a Tierra Grande Drive home, completed only a few months ago by Stone, Post & Flower.

"Post houses make sense in the Valley, and we plan to continue to use the pole construction designs," says Binford.

THE OUTDOORS is incorporated within these post houses not only through use of natural redwood inside and outside, but through generous provision of decking and glass. The 45-foot deck at the Tierra Grande house is accessible from three separate rooms, extending usable living space beyond walls.

ECHOING THE HILLSIDES' gently rounded curves, the Gothic design of this bedroom in Jeanne Gay's El Caminito Road home provides expansive living area. Laminated beams, bent to form the arch, are secured by large bolts, left exposed against the wooden dome.

REMOVING AS LITTLE of the vegetation as possible beneath and around the house maintains the ecological stability provided by root networks. Darrel Hambelton's home on Via Las Encinas was literally designed around an old oak tree. Growth of brush beneath the house is gradually returning the site to its natural fullness. →

EXCITING WORLD OF DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT

One evening in 1969, a knock at a door started a partnership that has been successful for five years, and has the indications of continuing so indefinitely.

Nelson Foreman answered the knock at his door that evening to find a stranger standing there. The stranger was Bill Oates. Bill had a business proposition to talk over with Nelson since he, Nelson, had been recommended by mutual friends. So began a friendship and long-standing business partnership.

That same year, they opened the Carmel Vintage Shoppe on Dolores in Carmel. After five successful years, they expanded with The Wine Cellar and Restaurant on Ocean Avenue, between Dolores and Lincoln. It was a unique idea of combining a wine shop with wine and cheese tasting, and a small, quaint restaurant. They have recently sold the Vintage Shoppe and are concentrating their efforts entirely on the Wine Cellar and Restaurant. The latter has been a success from the opening day, just a little more than one year ago.

Before the partnership was formed, Nelson had been managing a local Cork'n Bottle shop for eight years. Bill had been the owner and promoter of several radio and television stations. Among these were KSBW Radio, and Channel 8 in Salinas. Bill has also built and sold motels and hotels. One of these is the Hyatt House Tropics in Palm Springs. Bill says he is "retired," but obviously is keeping very busy with his promotion and business activities.

Bill and Nelson have a new assistant manager working with them, Bob Yates--an enthusiastic and hard-working young man.

The chefs, Lee McGuckin and his wife, Betty, have organized and prepared the restaurant's fine menu. The daily specials are complete dinners including desert and beverage for only $3.95! A different entree is featured for each day.

The other complete dinners on the menu were a surprise--Beef Wellington, Chicken Champignon and Princess Filet Mignon (for the ladies) are just a sample! Dinner is served from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.,

'Nitecap' rally at Carmel Valley Inn

HERB JEPKO will interview rally visitors at the Carmel Valley Inn on April 19 for his live radio broadcast of the Nitecap Show.

An anticipated 300 listeners to the Herb Jepko Nitecap Show, phone-in broadcast heard nightly over KSL, Salt Lake City, and WHAS Louisville, Ky. are scheduled to begin arriving next week at the Carmel Valley Inn for the annual Nitecap Rally.

Nitecap listeners presently total four and a half million. Previous rallies held in Carmel Valley have brought visitors from points as distant as Tokyo, Honolulu and London.

Registration for the three-day event will open at noon on Friday, April 19, and the day's program will include cocktails, buffet dinner and entertainment followed by the regular Nitecap "live" broadcast, direct from the Carmel Valley Inn, from 11 p.m. until 2 a.m.

During the three-hour broadcast, the customary telephone calls will not be received, and Jepko will instead interview rally visitors.

Saturday's activities will feature a buffet luncheon with guest speaker, The Rev. Walter Grumm presenting a talk on "Communication, You and I." The Saturday banquet, beginning at 8 p.m. will honor guests Herb Jepko, and his wife, Patsy. Monterey's Sal Mercurio will provide music for dancing.An 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. breakfast on Sunday will conclude the rally activities.

Tickets are available for all events at the Carmel Valley Inn. Call 659-3131 for further information.

'Peter Rabbit' featured in Tantamount's Easter show

The Tantamount will offer grand family entertainment this Easter weekend with its presentation of "Peter Rabbit and the Tales of Beatrix Potter," filmed in color in 1970.

The famous Potter stories about frogs, ducks, foxes, pigs, Mrs. Tittle-Mouse and Mrs. Twiggy Winkle are brought to life vividly by Britain's Royal Ballet, wonderfully costumed and masked.

No words are needed, nor are any spoken during the imaginative extravaganza, which is mimed and danced to Frederick Ashton's choreographed scenario. The Covent Garden Opera House provides a rich musical background.

Only two showings are scheduled. Friday and Saturday nights, the doors will open at 8 p.m. and show time will be 8:40 p.m.

By LUCY SMITHSON

THE BIRTHDAY pony ran to our corral as soon as the party was over. Pretty soon his owner, just turned ten-years-old came after him.

"Do you need help putting on his bridle?" we asked.

"Oh, no I know how to put on his bridle," said the little girl. She took the bit in both hands and held it up to the pony's lips. She stared into the pony's eyes commandingly.

"Open your mouth, Ribbons."

The pony backed up the length of his tie rope. The birthday girl followed him and pressed the bit against his teeth. She obviously expected him to go "chomp" like some big hand puppet.

"I know he'll do it," she reassured me. "I already bridled him once."

Oh, wonderful innocent youth. Could we define loss of innocence as learning which plays, having worked once, will never work again?

It was plain that this pony, like so many kids' horses, was about to learn to be bridle shy.

For every horse which becomes bridle shy because of being hit around the head, there are a dozen that become bridle shy because of incorrect handling during the bridling procedure.

There is only one correct way to bridle a horse -- that is deftly. Horses are quick to take advantage of fumblers.

This is the way we showed the birthday girl to bridle her pony:

Stand on the pony's left side behind his ears and facing the same direction as his nose. Which is your right hand? That's right, the one next to the pony.

Can you reach over the top of his neck and pat him below the ears on the far side? You can? Good.

By putting your shoulder in the curve of his neck, can you reach up under his head and grasp his nose from the far side with that same (right) hand. Of course you can. And you can push his head that way and pull it this way very easily. Why, snuggled up to the horse's head like this, you're in complete control.

Now let's find out what you can do with your left hand. Rub the pony's lower lip with your left hand. The lip is round and bristly and kind of fits into the palm of your hand like a whiskery grapefruit.

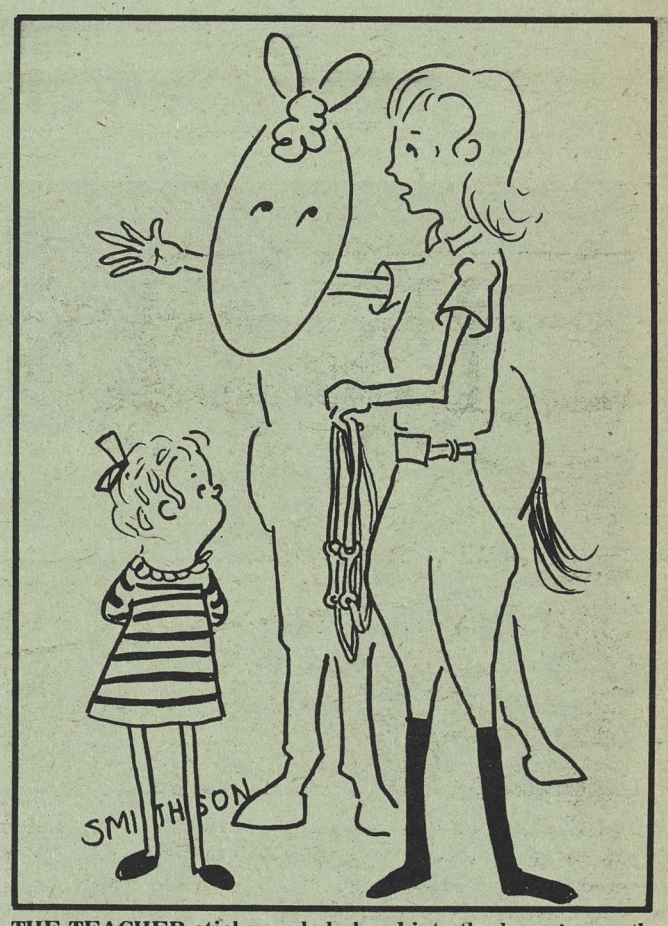
There's a narrow place just behind the lower lip where your thumb can curl up into the pony's mouth on this side and your little finger can curl into his mouth on that side. Its almost like putting your hand around someone's wrist.

Yes, it's alright to let your thumb slide between the pony's lips. Notice how he kind of chews his empty mouth when you do that? If you spread his lips, you can see that there are no teeth in the space where your thumb and little finger enter the pony's mouth. His biting teeth are up front; then there's an empty space; and somewhere, hidden back in the cheek, are all the rest of his chewing teeth.

That empty space is called the "bars" of the horse's mouth. It's a most convenient place to put a bit.

At this point, the teacher usually places an entire hand into the horse's mouth to show that there is no danger of being bitten.

Now we have a look at the bridle. Hang it in yuur right hand by the strap that will go around behind the horse's ears. Reach your right hand over the horse's neck, and part way down his face, reaching between his ears. Drape the sides of the bridle over the sides of the horse's head. Now lift the bit in your left hand.



THE TEACHER sticks a whole hand into the horse's mouth to show that there is no danger.

REMEMBER HOW nicely the horse's lower lip fits into your left hand? You're going to hold his lip and the bit at the same tiime. Yes, the thumb slides into his mouth on this side, and your little finger doesn't quite make it into the mouth on that side. That leaves you two fingers to push the metal mouthpiece between his teeth when he starts to chew on his empty mouth.

If the bridle has a chin strap or curb chain, ease it around the horse's lower lip with your left hand. Use the left hand to fold the horse's ears forward and stuff them under the bridle strap. The bridle's on. That was easy wasn't it?

What about the horse who puts his nose up into the air? He's already learned half the fun of being bridle shy.

You can grasp the cheekpieces of the bridle in both hands hook the crown piece over the horse's nose and pull his head down that way. You can also reach up and clamp down on his nose from the far side and wrestle him down. Usually it takes a combination of both, and a minute or two to get a horse's head back down to business. Soothing words usually help.

Some imitation cowboys will grab an ear and twist it to get a horse's attention. Earing down a horse is a method used in the old days to bridle a wild mustang. It will only make a saddle horse headshy. Hitting a horse on or near his head or making sudden hand movements toward his eyes also tend to make a horse headshy.

On rare occasions in a horse's life, there may be a good reason to haul off and smack him one. If a horse doesn't learn quickly to stop doing whatever it is you're hitting him for, then more hitting is not going to teach him. If you find yourself hitting a horse fairly often, get together with a trainer and learn a better way of communicating with the animal.

PERUSING A FEW of the hundreds of books to be offered for sale at the "Bargains in Books" scholarship benefit, sponsored by the Monterey Bay Wellesley Club, Mrs. John F. Bell, class of '24, shows granddaughter Paige Thomson a favorite. The sale will begin at 8:30 a.m. and last until 6 p.m. on Friday, April 19.

'Bargains in Books' to be offered by Wellesley

Wellesley College's annual "Bargains in Books" sale will be held Friday, April 19 from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Estrada Adobe on Tyler Street, Monterey, behind the Monterey Savings and Loan Building.

Twenty-four categories of books will be offered, including a group of "nearly new" books, suitable for gifts.

Proceeds from the sale will go to a scholarship fund honoring the memory of Barbara Bell Thomson, formerly of Carmel Knolls Drive, and a Wellesley graduate of 1954. Mrs. Fred Bell, her mother, also a resident of Carmel Knolls Drive, is a Wellesley graduate, class of 1924.

During a recent visit to the Monterey Peninsula, Dr. Barbara Newell, president of the women's college in Massachusetts, stated that last year, for the first time, the financial needs of all students were met with scholarship aid. Dr. Newell indicated that sustained support from alumnae groups, such as the Monterey Bay Wellesley Club, have made this achievement possible.

'Three Musketeers': fast-paced and fun

By GALE QUINSEY

"The Three Musketeers," now playing at the Valley Cinema, is something like the eighth remake of the Alexandre Dumas classic, and is being touted by some critics as being the best of them all, even surpassing the Douglas Fairbanks version. Not having any basis for comparison, we can only judge this newest contender on its own merits, which are considerable.

It may sound trite, but it is nevertheless true that "The Three Musketeers" is one of those rare movies that has an appeal that knows no age boundaries. For once, the Hollywood publicists aren't exaggerating: this film can be enjoyed by children of all ages.

Directed by Richard Lester (who gave us the marvelously innovative "A Hard Day's Night"), this star-studded film is a sheer delight, replete with fast pacing, wild humor, a frenetic, multi-faceted plot and out-and-out slapstick. The action sequences are plentiful and vividly re-enacted, and the costumes and sets are positively luscious in their opulence.

The film devotes itself to the exploits of its hero, D'Artagnan (Michael York), a rather awkward, over-eager young farm boy who harbors the notion of becoming a member of the exciting, cavalier, ever-gallant musketeers. Coached in dueling maneuvers by his father, D'Artagnan sets off for Paris on the back of a plow horse, where he immediately becomes entangled with villains, voluptuous ladies and challenges to duels.

Teaming up with three rowdy, rambunctious, free-wheeling musketeers (Richard Chamberlin, Oliver Reed and Frank Finlay), the four men find themselves up to their sword hilts in a series of wild adventures and heroic duels.

The climactic adventure of the film revolves around a scheme plotted by the wily Cardinal Richelieu (Charlton Heston), and his attempts to dishonor the Queen (Geraldine Chaplin) by exposing her affair with the Duke of Buckingham (Simon Ward). Needless to say, the musketeers come to the rescue of their beloved queen, and the results are hilarious, adventurous and thoroughly entertaining.

There is never a dull moment in this wonderful film. The casting, with one exception, is superb. The four musketeers are excellent, most particularly York. Faye Dunaway, as an eternally scheming lady of the court in cahoots with the cardinal, is properly icy and cold-blooded. And Racquel Welch, as the queen's closest confidant and recipient of York's attentions, is for once perfectly cast as a none-too-bright, slightly ludicrous, over-ripe wench.

The one exception is the casting of Heston as the cardinal. Despite the putty nose and rheumy limp, Heston's portrayal has about as much force and depth as a saltine cracker. Late, late TV movie devotees know that no one else has ever portrayed Cardinal Richelieu with the guile, cunning and cleverness that George Arliss appropriately gave to that role. Unfortunately, Heston comes across as little more than a leaden, chariotless Ben Hur.

Happily, a sequel to this film, "The Four Musketeers," will be released in a few months. Meanwhile, "The Three Musketeers" is available for viewing for all those who enjoy movie making at its most entertaining. The film plays nightly at the Valley Cinema, Mid-Valley Shopping Center. For more information, phone 624-5111.

Magic Carpet to feature 'Kid' Stuff'

The Magic Carpet, children's theater division of Hidden Valley Music Seminars, announces the opening this month of its newest show, called "Kids' Stuff."

"Kids' Stuff" will open the weekend after Easter, on Friday, April 19. The show will run for two weekends, through Sunday, April 28.

About a year ago, the Magic Carpet tried an experiment -- they decided to perform some of the stories, short plays, and imaginative pieces that local schoolchildren had sent to them. The experiment succeeded so well that the Magic Carpet, with "Kids' Stuff," is building its third major show around the playwrighting talents of local children.

"Kids' Stuff" is another entire evening of the Magic Carpet's innovations with children's writings. Opening April 19, show times are 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and 2 p.m. on Sundays, through April 28, at the Hidden Valley Theater on Carmel Valley Road.

Admission is $1 for children, $2 for adults.

Fund to honor Edna McKinnon

The Edna Rankin McKinnon Development Fund, honoring this pioneer in birth control, has been established with a gift of money from a local donor.

Mrs. McKinnon, a Carmel Valley resident, has recently been featured in a biography entitled, "Too Many People, Too Little Love."

The fund is provided for program growth and expansion of Planned Parenthood of Monterey County, located at 216 17th St. in Pacific Grove. This organization provides the only family planning clinic in Pacific Grove and because of tremendous response to its service, is now looking for larger quarters.

Donations and bequests can be addressed to Planned Parenthood of Monterey County, 216 17th St., Pacific Grove or to Ed Fisher, Security Savings and Loan Association, 1033 Broadway or P.O. Box 8 Seaside, 93955.

Local Red Cross provides aid

"As in all instances of major disaster, the American National Red Cross is on the scene of the recent Mid-West tornadoes to give immediate assistance in that devastated area," says Margaret MacDonald, Carmel Chapter executive director.

American Red Cross disaster specialists were working day and night to provide emergency relief to thousands of victims in the 10 states in the Mid-West and South.

The organization was mobilizing additional relief workers and mobile equipment from around the nation to help with the worst tornado disaster in 49 years.

"At times like this, the compassion and help of all Americans is needed to alleviate the suffering of these homeless people," Mrs. MacDonald explained. "If you wish to help, your contribution can be made through your local Red Cross, Box AR, Carmel. All contributions will go directly to the people who need it most through the skilled methods of Red Cross disaster workers."

More than 800 Red Cross Disaster workers and nurses were aiding the homeless and injured in the stricken states last week according to disaster directors.

Valley artist exhibits

Tina Roberts (Carmel), Jean Ocker (Carmel Valley), and Margaret Roberts (Pebble Beach), will have paintings in the 44th Annual Statewide Art Exhibition held at the Santa Cruz Art League Gallery, 526 Broadway. The exhibit will run from March 31 thru April 30. Hours are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

These local artists are all members of the Central Coast Art Association.
